About Brand Finance.

Brand Finance is the world’s leading independent brand valuation and strategy consultancy.

Brand Finance was set up in 1996 with the aim of ‘bridging the gap between marketing and finance’. For more than 20 years, we have helped companies and organisations of all types to connect their brands to the bottom line.

We pride ourselves on four key strengths:

- Independence
- Technical Credibility
- Transparency
- Expertise

We put thousands of the world’s biggest brands to the test every year, evaluating which are the strongest and most valuable.

Brand Valuation Methodology.

Brand Finance calculates the values of the brands in its league tables using the Royalty Relief approach – a brand valuation method compliant with the industry standards set in ISO 10668.

This involves estimating the likely future revenues that are attributable to a brand by calculating a royalty rate that would be charged for its use, to arrive at a “brand value” understood as a net economic benefit that a licensor would achieve by licensing the brand in the open market.

The steps in this process are as follows:

1. Calculate brand strength using a balanced scorecard of metrics assessing Marketing Investment, Stakeholder Equity, and Business Performance. Brand strength is expressed as a Brand Strength Index (BSI) score on a scale of 0 to 100.

2. Determine royalty range for each industry, reflecting the importance of brand to purchasing decisions. In luxury, the maximum percentage is high, in extractive industry, where goods are often commoditised, it is lower. This is done by reviewing comparable licensing agreements sourced from Brand Finance’s extensive database.

3. Calculate royalty rate. The BSI score is applied to the royalty range to arrive at a royalty rate. For example, if the royalty range in a sector is 0-5% and a brand has a BSI score of 80 out of 100, then an appropriate royalty rate for the use of this brand in the given sector will be 4%.

4. Determine brand-specific revenues by estimating a proportion of parent company revenues attributable to a brand.

5. Determine forecast revenues using a function of historic revenues, equity analyst forecasts, and economic growth rates.

6. Apply the royalty rate to the forecast revenues to derive brand revenues.

7. Brand revenues are discounted post-tax to a net present value (NPV) which equals the brand value.

Foreword.

What is the purpose of a strong brand: to attract customers, to build loyalty, to motivate staff? All true, but for a commercial brand at least, the first answer must always be ‘to make money’.

Huge investments are made in the design, launch, and ongoing promotion of brands. Given their potential financial value, this makes sense. Unfortunately, most organisations fail to go beyond that, missing huge opportunities to effectively make use of what are often their most important assets. Monitoring of brand performance should be the next step, but is often sporadic. Where it does take place, it frequently lacks financial rigour and is heavily reliant on qualitative measures, poorly understood by non-marketers.

As a result, marketing teams struggle to communicate the value of their work and boards then underestimate the significance of their brands to the business. Sceptical finance teams, unconvinced by what they perceive as marketing mumbo jumbo, may fail to agree necessary investments. What marketing spend there is, can end up poorly directed as marketers are left to operate with insufficient financial guidance or accountability. The end result can be a slow but steady downward spiral of poor communication, wasted resources, and a negative impact on the bottom line.

Brand Finance bridges the gap between marketing and finance. Our teams have experience across a wide range of disciplines from market research and visual identity to tax and accounting. We understand the importance of design, advertising, and marketing, but we also believe that the ultimate and overriding purpose of brands is to make money. That is why we connect brands to the bottom line.

By valuing brands, we provide a mutually intelligible language for marketing and finance teams. Marketers then have the ability to communicate the significance of what they do, and boards can use the information to chart a course that maximises profits. Without knowing the precise, financial value of an asset, how can you know if you are maximising your returns? If you are intending to license a brand, how can you know you are getting a fair price? If you are intending to sell, how do you know what the right time is? How do you decide which brands to discontinue, whether to re-brand and how to arrange your brand architecture? Brand Finance has conducted thousands of brand and branded business valuations to help answer these questions.

Brand Finance’s research revealed the compelling link between strong brands and stock market performance. It was found that investing in highly-branded companies would lead to a return almost double that of the average for the S&P 500 as a whole.

Acknowledging and managing a company’s intangible assets taps into the hidden value that lies within it. The following report is a first step to understanding more about brands, how to value them and how to use that information to benefit the business.

The team and I look forward to continuing the conversation with you.
Executive Summary.

Roche retains healthy lead

Roche has defended the title of the world’s most valuable pharmaceutical brand, as its brand value increased 8% to US$6.9 billion. Roche was able to stay ahead of second-ranked Bayer (brand value up 11% to US$6.2 billion) although the gap between the two has narrowed slightly.

Roche’s brand value increase was driven by strong performance in the United States, where it benefited from a 14% growth in sales. Elsewhere, results were not so strong, particularly in Japan (sales steady) and Europe (sales down 8%), where Roche is challenged by generic drugs undercutting sales.

Merck makes speedy recovery

Merck (brand value up 29% to US$4.1 billion) is the year’s biggest mover, with the brand achieving the fastest growth amongst the industry’s top ten. Merck has jumped two places in the rankings, overtaking both Sanofi (brand value up 2% to $3.4 billion) and Novartis, to enter into the top 5.

Merck’s brand value bounced back strongly after it saw a decline last year, following a cyber-attack in June 2017 which both undermined customer confidence and reduced production of Gardasil 9 drugs. The resilience of the company in the face of challenging circumstances and ability to rebound strongly is testament to the strength of the brand.

Roche remains the most valuable pharmaceutical brand as a result of its continued investment in world-leading drug development. While it will always face challenges from generic competitors, the purchase of Foundation Medicine in 2018 is a great opportunity to enable Roche to leverage its brand by deploying its personalised healthcare strategy. Roche is in a strong position to lead the industry in genomic profiling to develop new cancer treatments and improve patient care.

Bayer strengthens despite association with Monsanto

Bayer has maintained its position as the world’s strongest pharmaceutical brand and is the only brand in the industry to post a AAA- rating. Bayer’s Brand Strength Index (BSI) score improved to 83.1 from 81.2 out of 100 over the past year, despite the brand’s latest association with Monsanto – a new acquisition by Bayer’s chemical business.

The Monsanto brand has fallen from favour after long-term mainstream criticism based on health concerns over its products, such as Roundup, and their influence on the food industry and the environment. Bayer is planning to retain the various names of individual products but terminate the overarching Monsanto brand, whose reputation is proving problematic for the future of Bayer’s business.

The questions concerning the treatment of a changing brand portfolio are not just pertinent to Bayer. The transfer of the consumer healthcare business of GSK from a Novartis joint venture last year, into a new deal with Pfizer, and eventually into a separate business within three years, is a symptom of an industry where rising costs of development pipelines have caused a lot of businesses to experiment with acquisition and divestment. This can create confusion among customers, doctors, pharmacists, and other stakeholders, and presents new challenges for brand managers regarding positioning and strategy.

Bayer is the world’s strongest pharmaceutical brand because it has been able to strategically protect its reputation from various contentious public and political issues. It is no different with the acquisition of Monsanto, where the leadership are clearly taking the right steps to reinforce stakeholder trust.

Definitions.

Brand Value

+ Enterprise Value
The value of the entire enterprise, made up of multiple branded businesses.
Where a company has a purely mono-branded architecture, the ‘enterprise value’ is the same as ‘branded business value’.

+ Branded Business Value
The value of a single branded business operating under the subject brand.
A brand should be viewed in the context of the business in which it operates. Brand Finance always conducts a branded business valuation as part of any brand valuation. We evaluate the full brand value chain in order to understand the links between marketing investment, brand-tracking data, and stakeholder behaviour.

+ Brand Contribution
The overall uplift in shareholder value that the business derives from owning the brand rather than operating a generic brand.
The brand values contained in our league tables are those of the potentially transferable brand assets only, making ‘brand contribution’ a wider concept. An assessment of overall ‘brand contribution’ to a business provides additional insights to help optimise performance.

+ Brand Value
The value of the trade mark and associated marketing IP within the branded business.
Brand Finance helped to craft the internationally recognised standard on Brand Valuation – ISO 10668. It defines brand as a marketing-related intangible asset including, but not limited to, names, terms, signs, symbols, logos, and designs, intended to identify goods, services or entities, creating distinctive images and associations in the minds of stakeholders, thereby generating economic benefits.

Brand Strength

Brand Strength is the efficacy of a brand’s performance on intangible measures, relative to its competitors.

In order to determine the strength of a brand, we look at Marketing Investment, Stakeholder Equity, and the impact of those on Business Performance.

Each brand is assigned a Brand Strength Index (BSI) score out of 100, which feeds into the brand value calculation. Based on the score, each brand is assigned a corresponding rating up to AAA+ in a format similar to a credit rating.

Analysing the three brand strength measures helps inform managers of a brand’s potential for future success.

Marketing Investment
- A brand that has high Marketing Investment but low Stakeholder Equity may be on a path to growth. This high investment is likely to lead to future performance in Stakeholder Equity which would in turn lead to better Business Performance in the future.
- However, high Marketing Investment over an extended period with little improvement in Stakeholder Equity would imply that the brand is unable to shape customers’ preference.

Stakeholder Equity
- The same is true for Stakeholder Equity. If a company has high Stakeholder Equity, it is likely that Business Performance will improve in the future.
- However, if the brand’s poor Business Performance persists, it would suggest that the brand is inefficient compared to its competitors in transferring stakeholder sentiment to a volume or price premium.

Business Performance
- Finally, if a brand has a strong Business Performance but scores poorly on Stakeholder Equity, it would imply that, in the future, the brand’s ability to drive value will diminish.
- However, if it is able to sustain these higher outputs, it shows that the brand is particularly efficient at creating value from sentiment compared to its competitors.
